"TOTE" TRACKS FAIL TO BUILD UP STAMINA

By J. W. MARCHBANK

Sad to say, distance racing seems fated to disappear from the sport scene. As was pointed out recently by an expert, the shortening up of races has become so acute the number of first class events in the country beyond ten furlongs has dwindled to the Belmont, the Lawrence Realization, the Saratoga Cup and the Jockey Club Gold Cup.

The thought comes that, perhaps, some pundits are correct in seeing a connection between the undoubted deterioration of the thoroughbred and the almost universal use of the pari mutual system of wagering. Glancing over the few remaining route contests one will note all are run on courses in the state of New York, where bookmaking prevails. The bookmaker bets a certain horse will lose and cares little as to the distance of the race. The association derives a stated income from each book, also regardless of the length of the races.

With the mutuels in operation, the situation is different. The association's income is dependent upon the volume of play and it has been found that the handle increases with a superabundance of sprints, with a large number of entries in each, if possible. The only way to get away from a deplorable condition is for the association to be content with a modest return on the investment and that only comes when the men at the helm hold ideals of the highest sportsmanship. Dividend-mad promoters, as I have stated before, are not interested in encouraging the breeding of a staying type of the blood horse by cutting down scrambles.

I cannot refrain from noting what John L. Hervey, the best commentator in the United States on racing, recently said about the late Dr. W. H. B. Medd, also a devotee of the game. Hervey knew Dr. Medd only by correspondence, but he soon made the deduction Dr. Medd was an Englishman, as he was, though he lived on this side of the big pond. Characterization of the Medd letters as being clear, cool common sense, with no undue emphasis, with a self-contained style and a straightforward, lucid manner of "getting over" what the writer had to express has a lesson for the flamboyant, jazzy, uninforming method affected by some turf reporters, East and West.

HORSES GO FAST IN PREPARATION FOR RACE MEET

Well Known Owners Ship Best Runners To Tanforan For Early Galloping On Track.

With the opening of the fall session at "our own" Tanforan only two weeks away, interest in the racing is increasing fast up and down the coast and even in Eastern racing centers. Early arrivals at the track are showing promising training gallops and large fields of clever runners appear to be a certainty for opening day, Saturday, October 5.

Watchers of the "work-outs" are enthusing about the way the gallopers from various sections are going along in their preparations for actual competition. Especial attention is being given by the clocking brigade to the high class performers that came here in the Major Austin Taylor stable. Interest is also keen in runners sent up from Mira Monte Stock Farm by N. W. Church. A string brought over from Heather Farm by trainer Kay Spence for J. W. Marchbank, the C. S. Howard stable from Pleasanton, and horses of various owners being conditioned by Lester Lee are training well.

There will be a sweepstakes at Tanforan on each of the Saturdays of the period of sport and also on "get away day," Monday, November 11, which should be one of the biggest days of the meeting on account of falling on the celebration of the Armistice.

On the opening day the feature will be the A. B. Spreckels Handicap, which is expected to attract all the best horses in training. The race is named in honor of the memory of the noted California breeder, who sent the home-bred Morvich and other good horses to the East. Morvich, it will be recalled, won the Kentucky Derby after being sold by his breeder.

BASEBALL TEAM TO PLAY SCAVENGERS

The Daly City Tanforan ball club will play the Sunset Scavenger team of San Francisco at the Club House diamond of the Seventh and Harrison Park.

The game will begin at 2:30 in the afternoon and a hot contest is expected, as the two teams are evenly matched.

WANTS TO FIRE COUNTY ENGINEER AS INCOMPETENT

Supervisor Witt Says Acting Official Shows Unfitness To Perform Duties

At the meeting on Monday, after the board heard a written report from Harry W. Arnold, inspector on the Lobitas bridge, that the cost under Scott's plans would be about $2500 greater than the bridge could be constructed for under private contract, Supervisor Witt of Daly City arose and declared:

"This is just another instance of the incompetency of Scott. If the board takes no action on this I will go before the grand jury and ask an investigation. I'm going to see this matter through to the finish."

In his report on the project, being done by the county road department, Arnold said $23 was being paid daily for employment of one foreman, one carpenter and one laborer.

Scott told the board the bridge was not yet finished but it would be completed at a cost of approximately $3500.

"How are you going to do that when the material alone is going to cost more than that?" Witt demanded. Scott did not reply to this.

MORE "HOT AIR" IN OUSTER MOVE AGAINST KELLOGG

Beer Wants Resignation Of County Executive, But Refuses To Make Specific Charges.

The abortive attempt to oust the present county executive again failed at the meeting of the County Board of Supervisors on Monday of this week.

Supervisor Beer of San Mateo introduced a resolution that if Executive Kellogg did not tender his resignation forthwith, the District Attorney be instructed to immediately take steps to effect his removal. The motion to adopt the resolution was seconded by Supervisor Poole of Redwood City.

Supervisor Albert Witt Jr. of Daly City, immediately after Beer introduced his resolution at the board meeting, said that he believed such a resolution as it had been introduced should be backed up with facts.

"I'm certainly not going to vote for a 'cat in the sack,'" Witt declared. He moved that the resolution be postponed until such time as Beer

ROGERS COMEDY LAUGH HOLIDAY

One Of Last Pictures Of The Beloved Humorist Is Considered Greatest

"Doubting Thomas" is one of the beloved Will Rogers last pictures, before his tragic death, which terminated a brilliant career in which he endeared himself to the hearts of the world. Irony as it may seem, the picture is one of the most laughable pictures he had ever made.

"Doubting Thomas" in which Will portrays the funniest role he has yet attempted, is a picture that is a laugh. It will be shown for three days, Thursday, Friday and Saturday, September 19, 20 and 21, at the Daly City Theater.

Rogers portrays the role of a simple, home-loving sausage manufacturer, whose home-life is suddenly tossed into a turmoil when an amateur impresario, Alison Skipworth (who played the same role on the stage) persuades his wife, Billie Burke, that she has been suppressed all of her married life and that she really belongs to the stage and her public.

Rogers' son, Frank Albertson, finds that his sweetie, Frances Grant, has also become stage-struck. Father and son have their troubles after wife and fiancée appear in an amateur charity show which will force theater audiences to hold on to their seats.

Rogers finally effects a cure that will make America's ace humorist more loved than ever.

Sterling Holloway is a scream as the bungling sound-effects man for the amateur play.

Also "The Scoundrel," with Noel Coward.

Ladies Ovenserve Wednesday. Amateur night—Sunday.

PRESIDENT ACCORDED POWERFUL SUPPORT

By J. W. MARCHBANK
Pioneer in Frontier Mining Work

There is a music in the affairs of men which one may take one's part in or which one may spoil.—Plato.

President Roosevelt must be heartened by recent utterances of various liberals, who recognize, as he does, the necessity of the arousing of social consciousness in the changed conditions of modern life brought about mainly by technological advance. What is right to the point, too, is the fact the men, seeing almost eye to eye with the chief executive of our great nation, are not professional politicians. I am inclined to accept them as men of vision and well worth listening to, in order to catch any words that may help in getting us out of the bog of the depression.

John Dewey's new book, "Liberalism and Social Action," is all for assisting what the President denominated some time back as the forgotten man. He sets forth a different liberalism from that of tradition. Liberalism has always emphasized liberty and Professor Dewey is still attached to that ideal, but he wants to repair the ravages of restricted opportunities by helping to create a social structure in which the ideal will become a reality for the many and not simply for the few.

The well known liberal believes coercive and violent force are relied upon in the present social system as a means of social control and that the way to dissuade the holders of privilege and power from violence to prevent necessary social change is to demonstrate to the privileged class that intelligence must be regarded as a social asset and not as an individual right.

LAUGHTER AND DRAMA COMBINE IN GREAT FILM

Old Time Gambler Goes Into Insurance Business With Laughable Results

Laughter and drama, combined with a real love story, characterize the new Warner Bros. comedy "Don't Bet on Blondes" which will be the feature production at the Daly City Theater Sunday and Monday, September 22 and 23.

Warren William, for the first time cast in a light comedy role, and Guy Kibbee, have the principal parts.

"Don't Bet on Blondes" is the story of a big time gambler, Warren William, who discovers that the insurance business not only offers all the thrills of his old profession, but is entirely respectable. So he opens a miniature "Lloyd's," and undertakes to write insurance on or against anything presented to him.

One of his customers is Guy Kibbee, portraying a lovable, but worthless, old scamp who is supported by his daughter, Claire Dodd. Guy insures her against marriage for $50,000, and William, to protect his investment, adopts racketeer methods to scare off her suitors.

How he failed to frighten one of them away, and how he was compelled to pay $50,000 to his father-in-law, form but a few of the many strange and laughable situations which feature the plot of the story.

Claire Dodd, heretofore a screen menace, is said to reveal new and delightful talents in a sympathetic "good woman" role.

Also "Keeper of the Bees," with Neil Hamilton and Betty Furness. Ladies Ovenserve Wednesday. Amateur night—Sunday.

Reinhold Niebuhr, of the Union Theological Seminary, disagrees in some measure with the hopefulness expressed by Dewey. In a review of the book, Niebuhr says:

"A liberalism which defends liberty as a public necessity rather than a private right will supposedly soothe the savage breast of an imperiled and frantic oligarchy, while the older and more individualistic liberalism merely succeeded in maintaining liberty as long as it did not menace the status quo. One might as well expect to beguile the gentlemen of the Liberty League to modify their touching devotion to the constitution by proving to them logically, rationally and intellectually that the flexibility of the constitution is a necessary prerequisite of orderly social change."

With other sections, British Columbia is increasing its output of gold. A recent estimate is to the effect that the production of the yellow metal this year will reach the all time mark of $12,250,000, an increase of $1,300,000 over production last year. The figures are furnished by the Department of Mines.

Silver production, up in volume and value, is expected to top last year's figures by $1,500,000.

Mineral production in the province last year was worth $42,000,000 and a net gain of more than $2,000,000 is expected after the absorption of losses in zinc and copper.

The Dominion of Canada Bureau of Statistics recently recorded that per capita production of gold in Canada has risen from $3.86 in 1925 to $9.45 in 1934.

South Africa is still going strong in turning out gold. A late compilation gave that part of the world 5,268,000 ounces for the first six months of 1935, while Canada was given 1,517,000 ounces. Output of gold all over the globe for the year is expected to be slightly more than last year.

It is possible there has been an increase in Russia's production in the first six months, when compared with the same period last year, but verification of estimates is impossible, so the American Bureau of Metal Statistics places output in Russia the same as last year, 2,100,000 ounces.

Canada is falling behind the United States this year and may be relegated to fourth place among the nations. United States output for the six months was 1,547,000 ounces, indicating a total for the year of 3,094,000, compared with 2,916,373 ounces in 1934, the increase largely accounted for by greater output from the Philippine Islands.

ACTIVITIES OF OLD GLORY POST

(By Walter J. Lehigh)
Our next meeting, September 27, should be attended by all members who can possibly be there. It's a big night. Nomination of officers is of grave importance to any organization and this is one of the feature events of this meeting. A large class of recruits are to be initiated. Comrade Jack Lewis will officiate.

October 13 and 14 are V. F. W. days at Yountville. Competitive drills will be in order and we ought to be there to give the teams of No. 2044, moral support and a hand.

Last meeting, September 13, was a hummer. Every chair was occupied and some were sitting on the deck. It was the San Mateo-Santa Clara Counties Council meeting. Every Post was well represented. Space doesn't permit relating all that was said and done; you'll have to come up and see for yourself.

Much anxiety is being felt at this writing as to how the weather will be on V. F. W. night at Bayshore Kennels. It will be all over by the time you read this, so there'll be lots of "I told you so's" and "I thought so's," but we bet it'll be a "Big Success," fog or shine.

MARINE CORPS TO CONTINUE WORK

Recruiting for the Marine Corps will continue indefinitely, according to information received by postmaster at Daly City. A limited number of applicants will be accepted monthly to fill vacancies caused by discharges and retirements.

Information about this colorful branch of the government service may be obtained from the local postmaster, or by writing to the Marine Corps Recruiting Station, 100 Harrison street, San Francisco.

HOLD SERVICES AT SYNAGOGUE

Services will also be held on Yom Kippur Sunday evening, October 6 at 7 o'clock and Monday, October 7.

Mr. Wolf and Mr. Plansky will conduct the services. B. Silver is secretary.

JEFFERSON UNION HIGH SCHOOL BOARD MEETS

A special meeting of the Jefferson Union High School Board of Trustees was held in the High School Building Monday evening of this week, at 8 o'clock. Dr. Callen, chairman of the board, presided. Trustees Brown, Jensen, Sanders, and Vireno, and Principal James Ferguson were present.

There were also present Messrs. Reising and McGinness, the architects who drew up the preliminary plans for the gymnasium and swimming pool for the school, and which were submitted to the federal government in making application for a grant of money to construct the building; also Mr. E. Scott, of the Scott Machinery Company, which is putting in a new well on the school grounds.

Principal James Ferguson reported that he had interviewed the state director of the PWA regarding the progress of the gymnasium and swimming pool project, and had been informed that it was still under consideration by the federal authorities at Washington, although over ninety of the applications from other schools and municipalities in California had been rejected as not complying with the requirements of the federal authorities. In order to make it more certain that the Jefferson Union High School request would be finally granted, some minor changes in the details of the application were suggested by state officials, he said. By unanimous vote of the board, the clerk was instructed to write to the state director of the PWA, making the necessary modifications.

The members of the Board expressed themselves enthusiastically regarding the prospect of having a gymnasium and swimming pool added to the high school. Such an addition would be a valuable asset to the community for it could be used not only by the high school students, but by adults in the evenings, and at special times by the grammar school pupils. Besides, the grant by the federal government to the Jefferson Union High School District would amount to a sum in excess of $50,000. The balance needed in the construction would be loaned by the federal government at a low rate of interest, thereby saving the district thousands of dollars of what it would cost for construction at any other time.

Trustee Vireno was authorized to supervise the installation of the pump in the new well.

Principal James Ferguson reported that the high school grounds were being seriously affected by the dust from the gravel pit which is located immediately west of the grounds, and that many complaints had been made about it. He said he had found it necessary to instruct the physical education teacher, not to take their classes out on the athletic field and tennis courts when the dust is blowing over the grounds. The condition he described as seriously affecting the health of every student in the high school.

After a full discussion, in which all members of the board took part, a resolution was unanimously adopted instructing the clerk to send a communication to the City Council of Daly City calling attention to the serious condition which exists, and requesting that steps be taken to remedy it.

CHURCH PARISH REUNIONS BEGIN

On this Friday evening, September 20, at 8:30 o'clock, in the Daly City auditorium, a grand reunion of the families of Our Lady of Perpetual Help Parish will take place under the direction of the ladies whose names begin with the letter R.

These parties were discontinued during the vacation period. This being the first of the season, a large crowd is expected, as the proceeds will go towards financing the parish school, which is filled to the doors this year and is doing splendid work in this community.

Those who like to play whist will find many attractions provided by the large committee whose members have worked so hard to make the affair a success. Come early and bring your friends. If you are new in the parish you will meet many at this affair that you are going to like.

SYNOPSIS

Following his father's criticism of his idle life, and the withdrawal of financial assistance, Hal Ireland, son of a wealthy banker, finds himself practically without funds but with the promise of a situation in San Francisco, which he must reach, from New York. He takes passage with a cross-country auto party on a "share expense" basis. Other members of the party include an attractive girl, Barry Trafford; middle-aged, Gilles Kerrigan; Sister Anastasia, a nun; and an individual whom he instinctively dislikes, Martin Crack. Barry's reticence annoys him. To Kerrigan he takes at once, but he distrusts Crack. He finds his intimacy with Kerrigan ripening, and makes a little progress with Barry. Through a misunderstanding, at a stopping place, Hal is directed to Barry's room, instead of his own, and they exchange kisses. Next day he tells her he loves her. She answers that she mustn't love him, without giving any reason. Crack brutally insults Kerrigan. Hal forces him to apologize abjectly, and his feeling of enmity and disgust toward Crack is intensified. Barry promises Hal that next day she will reveal the shadow of despair that hangs over her. She tells him that, at her father's urging, she had married a man many years older than she, and had promised her father, on his deathbed, to stick to her husband, "no matter what happened," for ten years. That was four years ago, and despite her knowledge of her husband's unworthiness, she is adamant in her determination to keep her promise, though acknowledging her love for Hal.

"Hadden't really planned to get stuck anywhere," said Hal.

Crack flushed a very little, but his lazy eyes still smiled as he bounced the ball again. Then the others came, and Hal tried to rout the discomfort under his skin by a look at Barry's fresh, unconscious bravery of carriage. She was there, and real: the slick of gold under her hat, the color touched to her smooth cheeks, the clear, young texture of her throat in the white-framed opening. It was impossible to conceive of her—of that man; yet under the habitual perceptions and responses that still commanded Hal's behavior, it was impossible not to try to conceive of him.

They were in Rawlins for a late lunch, with a sort of awed fatigue upon them all at the thought of having covered three hundred and fifty miles since getting up. Mrs. Pulsipher's one contribution before sustenance arrived surprised Hal a good deal: she looked at him severely, almost unfriendly, and said, "You're a fine driver, Mr. Ireland."

Then there was food, and Mrs. Pulsipher was very busy.

"When do you think we might come to Los Angeles?" Sister Anastasia asked Hal; she looked down shyly, sorry to have put so bothersome a question. "Perhaps you cannot say. But there is some one waiting for me in Santa Barbara; and if you could perhaps tell me when we would possibly be there, it would not be bad to telegraph from here—even if we did not come there in time."

Hal borrowed Kerrigan's pocket map and took out his pencil to measure.

"Look," he said, showing her: "if you don't mind traveling hard"—her limpid, gentle eyes deplored the implication that she was the only one to be considered—"we can be in Evanston—there—tonight. Salt Lake City is perhaps a little far. Then tomorrow night we can be in Las Vegas, and the distance from there to Los Angeles is less than what we have done this morning. So day after tomorrow, I should think, the bon Dieu willing." Day after tomorrow, and Barry had said, Los Angeles will end everything. It wasn't true; there was no end.

"Do you think I should telegraph?" she said, and under her modest acquiescence, Hal could see the unpleading trouble.

With a grace that would not have come if he had calculated it, he put his hand over hers on the table. "Sister, telegraph that," he said, smiling tender assurance, "and we will get there."

Her eyes thanked him again, and wished they could show him something that would help him too.

After lunch she went to telegraph. Kerrigan with her, and the Pulsiphers disappeared in search of souvenirs and popcorn. Crack sat on the runningboard of the car, his narrow body basking in the sunlight as his eyes did in their own pleasant thoughts. When Barry came from seeing to Dr. Caligari's lunch, Hal went to her and said, "Ride with me this afternoon."

"I think I'd better not," she said thoughtfully.

"I'll be good—I swear I'll be good," said Hal.

She looked at him in quick remorse. "Darling, I didn't mean that. It's Sister Anastasia. She's worried now, poor dear thing. She dreamt about her brother. Sometimes she held my hand this morning. If that helps, I'd like to be with her."

He tried not to look disappointed—smiled and leaned over to push his fist against Doctor Caligari's muzzle, wet and cool from a drink, but already panting again. "Right," he said. "I know. I hope to God we get there before her brother dies."

"Hal," she said, and he straightened up. "I've got to cheat, once." She looked down wondering at his mouth, then back at his eyes, and her quick whisper said, "I love you."

She went toward the door of the car, and Crack lounged up to open it. "Don't like the sunlight?" he said, but she got in without appearing to have heard him, her attention all for Doc's mistrust of Crack's courtesy. Crack sat at the door and sat down again, speculating drowsily on Hal. "Like the sunlight," he said. "Like the way it bites on your skin, through your clothes."

Barry's whisper repeated itself, quickly, softly, over and over in Hal's running blood. Think of nothing but that, you fool—nothing but that and the power, the omnipotence that rushes in it: there's nothing will stand against you—nothing will dare haunt you. Then he heard the echo of Crack's slow words and focused his look. "Mm," he said in absent flatness, "so do I."

"Moonlight," said Crack, his shy smile spreading a little, "doesn't bite on your skin, but it's nice." He kept looking at Hal as if he expected him to say something. "There'd ought to be a good moon tonight."

"Ought?" said Hal. He leaned over to unclip the hood and look at the oil gauge, the private waiting of Crack's blue eyes out of his vision, but only partly dismissed.

For more than an hour, Hal and Kerrigan didn't speak beyond monosyllables; yet it was as if the deepening of their sympathy had become tangible within the huge encompassment of this country—vast sweeps of sun-baked space under the sky, gigantic features definitely cleft from the petrified rafters of the world itself, sharp aspects balanced in unbreathing clearness—so very gradually shifted by the mortal hurry of the car. When Kerrigan grunted, or Hal murmured some single exclamation to himself, it was acknowledgment of what they not only watched, but felt, interpreted together. Somehow the awe of prodigious natural grandeur and the tonic of single human understanding were akin for Hal—not in their silent speech, but in their teaching to his unfledged spirit, his once disdainful, once indifferent, unfledged spirit.

One low, baking town commemorated the Overland Stage route with an old coach, weathered and brittle but still holding the grace of its curved underbody, the quaintness of its little windows. Beyond, there was an emergency landing field—red-and-white striped hut, beacon, and boundaries, arbitrarily fresh and trim in the middle of infinite emptiness. And a littered roadside stand or two offered incongruous memorial to another brave tradition in the name, "Pony Express Bar-B-Q."

Somewhere beyond the bare, dry, sage-tufted basin of the Divide, they came on road construction, the surface leaving no doubt that it was necessary. For five miles they bumped slowly on into harder going—so slowly at last that the niggles at a dead coyote, limply huddled against some white thistle poppies beside the road, didn't start up until the car bounced out of a hole abreast of them. "D—n, this is awful," said Hal. Kerrigan said, "Stop at that car up there, and I'll ask the fella what they've got that's better."

The fella said there were eight more miles of this, and after that a good deal more, but there was a side road half a mile west there, and if you turned south on that and kept bearing west you couldn't lose the way and you'd come into the route again after the worst was over. So they turned off in half a mile, lumbered across a rocky ditch that scraped Raspurin's undersides; but there was the dusty tracks of other cars ahead and the going was much better. Then Hal drove smartly around a twist onto an outcrop of jagged rock in the middle of the road: there was a bump, a crack, and a ripping sound underneath, and with a lifeless sigh Raspurin rolled to a sedate, silent stop.

"Waterloo! Waterloo! Waterloo! Morne plaine!" said Kerrigan. "Here's a situation."

"What's the matter?" Pulsipher asked, leaning forward.

"I think there may be something wrong with the car," said Kerrigan.

"Oh," said John.

As Hal got out, he said to Kerrigan, "How far d'you make it we've come from the highway?"

"'Bout five miles," said Kerrigan.

"But it didn't look like the Pennsylvania station there either, as I recall."

"No," said Hal glumly. He squatted down in the road to look under the car and saw a jagged plate of tin hanging ominously, under the front seat. "Lord!" he murmured and straightened to look back along the road. There lay the battery, in two pieces, near the torn remains of the tin box that had held it up. He walked back to it: it was efficiently wrecked, the bitter water already drunk down by the ground and the plates stuck over with grit. Hal nudged a piece of tin with his toe when Kerrigan and Crack came up, saying: "Look at the flimsy thing. Should've noticed that in Detroit, I s'pose. D—n it all anyway."

"It's a wonder we're alive," said Kerrigan, dropping the dead cigarette end from his lips as he raised a fresh one. "So what?"

"You hold the fort here; I'll go back to the highway and get a lift into a town and come out with another battery as soon as I can get it."

Crack made a sudden little sound, his eyes stirred by uncertain hope, and he said, "I'll go. Let me go."

Hal looked at him quickly, for a hint of his motive. That it was not merely to be of service he felt certain; yet Crack couldn't be afraid to stay out here. The drowsy eyes, smiling to themselves, weren't concerned with fear—seemed only to consider a lazy amusement in going on the errand. Hal was about to give his offer curt dismissal when Kerrigan said, "Sure, let him go."

An authority in Kerrigan's voice subdued Hal's feeling he should do it himself, left him open to the thought of an hour or two with Barry, Crack and his covert knowledge, his indolent curiosity, removed. They had the fella's bag and his fare; and . . .

"All right," said Hal, "if you won't start telegraphing and waiting for answers again. Now, look." He made notes of what he wanted on the back of an envelope of Kerrigan's, explaining each item carefully to Crack. "Got money?" He slapped his pocket so that the heavy collection of silver dollars chinked.

Crack smiled as if Hal's care amused him, and he said, "Yeah—more'n fifty dollars."

"Right," said Hal. "Keep track of what you spend; and make it fast as you can."

"Sure," said Crack amiably. He seemed for a moment to speculate on what Hal might be thinking of him. Then, moderately embarrassed, he said, "Well—so long"; and he started back along the dusty road, his narrow, graceless figure incongruous and small against the enormous panorama beyond him.

After a silent moment of watching him, Hal said in rueful quiet, "I don't know why we let him do it."

"He'll be all right," said Kerrigan. "Can't say I love him like a brother, but he'll be all right."

"Why, d—n him," said Hal suddenly. "It was this morning—in Cheyenne—he asked if everything was all right so that we wouldn't get stuck."

"He's a right queer little man," said Kerrigan, still curiously watching him go. "Ever notice the tops of his ears?"

"What is it that's odd about his ears?" said Hal, half turning back to the car, then glancing round again.

"They look as if they were trying to come to a point," said Kerrigan. "I've seen only two or three pairs like 'em. And always on secret little men."

Mrs. Pulsipher sat there, neither grim nor martyred, but as if nervously on the lookout for a chance of placating some one. Hal smiled in at Sister Anastasia and told her, "We'll still be there day after tomorrow;" but it seemed like a reckless statement. The nun's modest eyes showed him thanks and belief: her hand moved up from where, beside her, it had been in Barry's. And Barry's look at him was one of tender confederacy in sparing Sister Anastasia her reticent concern. Then Hal explained the situation briefly and sat down on the running board to smoke a cigarette.

All around here was space and stillness, with the dry radiance of the lowering sun hot upon it. As far as you could see, nothing stirred; for miles and miles away nothing made a sound.

"What's it liable to do out here at night?" said Hal. "Rain? Get cold?"

"Might get a little cooler," said Kerrigan, "but 'twon't rain. Be a fine night."

"We seem to be assuming we'll be here into the night," said Hal. "How about bears and tigers?"

"Not many," said Kerrigan. Hal looked at him and found his heavy face grave and respectful.

"What's up?"

"I'm sorry you've got things on your mind," Kerrigan said quietly.

Hal took a long breath and smiled at him. "I s'pose that's one thing a mind's for," he said. Then: "I sort of thought I wasn't keeping it from you. And that helps, too. Colonel, I want to ask you about something later—later, when—if you'll let me."

Kerrigan's heavy, somehow graceful hand patted Hal's leg; he glanced off at the layered rampart of rock beyond the tiny railroad line, then down between his knees. "You keep after her," he said. "She's worth plenty. And if you want to talk, here I am."

The door on the other side of the car slammed and Barry, with Doc eagerly beside her, came round to them, watching them as if they were a pair of amusing children when they rose before her.

Peninsular War Relics

Workmen have discovered heirlooms believed to have been hidden by Queen Carlotta Joaquina of Portugal to save them from looters during the French occupation of Lisbon in the Peninsular War of 1808-14. The men were installing electric lights in the ancient royal palace at Queluz, and found the heirlooms behind a panel in the wall of Queen Carlotta's bedroom.

One of the articles, an exquisitely worked altar crucifix of solid silver, weighs more than ten pounds. There are also six altar candlesticks of silver. All the articles belong to the period of King John V, 1706-1750.

BASKETBALL SAFE SPORT FOR GIRLS PHYSICALLY FIT

"Is Basketball a Girls' Game?" Under this title Frances Kidd discusses in Hygeia the physical dangers and benefits of basketball for young girls.

Basketball is a fast, hard game for girls, and unless it is properly coached and supervised, it has as many disastrous physical results as any game can have. The main objection to basketball is that physical examinations are not demanded of every girl participating. There is no other way of knowing who should play and who should not. Not all girls are physically equal; what is overstrain for some is not really sufficient exercise for others. In some cases, basketball can make too heavy a demand on the organic vitality of a growing girl.

Collisions and bumps occur in nearly every phase of life, and basketball is no exception; but good coaching attempts to limit these accidents by teaching balance and co-ordination along with agility and the proper method of managing one's body.

There are several health aspects of basketball that are worthy of mention. The vigorous large muscle movements stimulate the functioning of the internal organs that care for the needs of the body. Basketball is also of value in posture work and, like other physical education activities, it attempts to develop agility and to foster co-ordination of the eye, hand and body by means of "body control."

If young girls of high school age are physically fit, that is, if they have passed the doctor's inspection, they should be given an opportunity to play. With careful coaching in the fundamentals of the game, under the watchful eye of a competent leader, no disastrous results will prevail; for it is a real game with real fun for real youngsters.

THE NEW VISION OF LABOR

Five years ago, Labor Day symbolized Labor's rights to fair and decent treatment.

Five years ago, Labor Day symbolized the right of every man to work. Today, Labor Day symbolizes the right of the masses to the fruits of Labor.

It is an evolution in symbolism that presages a brighter and a happier world for all humanity.

It may sound paradoxical to wax cheerful over the prospects of the workingman while thousands and millions still remain without jobs.

But it is essential to look somewhat beyond the chaotic transition period while men are being replaced by machines.

It is inevitable that such replacement occur. It is inevitable that hardship and suffering ensue while this process goes on.

The first business of government and of our best intelligence is to shorten that period as much as possible and to understand and put to work the new principles of technology.

What is that meaning? The new technology has two distinct implications, both having a direct bearing on the welfare and happiness of the mass of the population.

The first implication is a greater abundance of food and goods for everybody.

We can already produce, with our machines, more food and goods than the world can consume, at least this North America part of the world.

Once the problem of distributing those foods and goods is solved—and it is the big vital problem confronting all intelligence and all statecraft—the eternal struggle for the bare necessities of food, clothing and shelter will be over.

The ambitious workman will work, not for those essentials that should be in the same category as common air and water, but for extra luxuries, extra refinements and self improvement.

The second implication of the new technology is the release of Labor from the backbreaking tasks of life.

We are unloading drudgery from the backs of men onto the backs of machines.

But because machines are built to perform these onerous tasks, there is no reason to believe that the present plethora of idle men must continue.

There are still many millions of years of work to be done that cannot and will not be accomplished by machines.

What the new technology will ultimately mean to Labor is the translation of men from ditches to laboratories, from weary drudgery to the brush and palette, from the labors of the hands to the labors of the mind, from the records of the time-clocks to the records of philosophic thought.

The world will be wiser, happier and more beautiful, and all men will share in that wisdom, happiness and beauty.

There is a middle course between the bloodshed and destruction urged by the Anarchist and the slaving toil of building a useless pyramid.

All our unemployment and all our social distress are merely an essential wandering in the wilderness before we reach a finer and a better Promised Land.

We are bound to get there sooner or later.

The duration of our wandering will depend entirely upon the intelligence, understanding and courage of those we choose to lead us.—Vancouver Sun.

SAN BRUNO LEGION TO GIVE BARN DANCE

San Bruno Post No. 409, American Legion, Committee on arrangements for the barn dance to be held in the Veterans Garage in San Bruno opposite Uncle Tom's Cabin, September 28, reported that this unique dance is being well received.

M. J. Kool chairman has increased his committee, as the many details involved in making this affair a success cannot be carried out with the original committee. Allen Gensel has been appointed as chairman on parking facilities.

The ticket sales committee has requested that additional tickets be printed, as the demands in San Francisco and throughout the county are unusually large.

The contact committee has requested that the annex to the garage be acquired to accommodate the attendance. Another committee has already begun preparing the floor.

REVIEW OF STATE PARENT TEACHER BOARD MEETING

Mrs. C. H. Turner, president of the California Congress of Parents and Teachers, received a surprise telegram simultaneously with the opening of the regular September meeting of the board of managers at the Los Angeles Biltmore Hotel Tuesday morning, September 10, at 9:30. The telegram requested her acceptance to an invitation to represent the United States as a delegate to the Child Welfare Conference in Mexico City, October 12 to 19. It is a signal honor for the Congress and Mrs. Turner, and her acceptance was wired immediately.

Vierling Kersey, state superintendent of public instruction, was present at the board meeting and spoke briefly. He announced that at the State Superintendent's convention, to be held in San Diego in October, there will be a parent teacher luncheon session at the Hotel Del Coronado and extended an invitation to board members to attend.

Speaking of parent education, Mr. Kersey, said: "Parent education is your 'child,' and is a mutual responsibility of the California Congress and the State department of education. It has been your great contribution to public education in California. It is now a part of the total public education program. Its status in California indicates our co-operation must be in terms of emphasis on the training of leaders." To this end a reorganization in the division of parent education, of which Dr. Gertrude Laws is chief, has been planned for the coming year. Dr. Laws will spend much of her time in teacher training institutions.

Mrs. P. D. Bevil, state chairman of legislation, advised a thorough study of the Constitution of the United States.

Three new associations were accepted into membership. They were: Thomas Starr King, Los Angeles Tenth District, and Lincoln and Wilcox Associations in Twenty-sixth district.

Three new loans were granted college students, making a total of thirty new loans for 1935-36. Funds for student loans are derived from the sale of State Life memberships. Mrs. Fred O. Slator of Los Angeles is state chairman.

Another committee was appointed to bring to the November board meeting a definite status for Fathers' Councils. Mrs. Roy A. Pratt of San Francisco, director of extension, is chairman of the committee. Others members appointed by Mrs. Turner are: Mrs. W. A. Price, Los Angeles; Mrs. L. K. Beever, Oakland; Mrs. P. L. Barnes, Long Beach; Mrs. Mark Jones, South Pasadena; Mrs. L. S. Rounsaville, Los Angeles; Mrs. W. R. Goddard, Los Angeles; Mrs. Fred D. Bethard, San Diego; Mrs. O. Miller Robertson, Riverside; Mrs. B. C. Clark, Sutter Creek.

Board members were grieved at the announcement of the death of Mrs. David O. Mears of Palo Alto. Mrs. Mears was a charter member of the National Congress and organized the first local parent-teacher unit in 1897 in New York City. She served the New York Congress as president from 1898 to 1905. In 1910 she originated the Founders' Day observance and in 1912 the convention voted to recognize the special day annually in honor of the founders, Alice McLellan Birney and Phoebe Apperson Hearst. From that time to the time of her death she was National chairman of Founders' Day. She was also first vice president of the National organization for eighteen years and served at National headquarters in Washington, D. C., during the war. A resolution of sympathy was passed by the board members.

Mrs. Turner left last week for Chicago to attend the meeting of the National Board of Managers, and the National Recreation Association Conference. She will return to California the first week in October.

WEEKLY BULLETIN

SUGGESTIONS IN CASE OF FIRE

By Chief A. P. Chesney
 Do not attempt to extinguish flaming window curtains or clothing with the bare hands; smother such a blaze with a blanket, small rug, coat or anything available which will protect your hands.

If your clothing should catch fire do not run, as that will cause a draft and the fire will only burn more rapidly. Lie down and roll on rug or, if able to get outside, roll in grass or dirt; never stand up, as flames always mount upwards.

If cornered in the house and exposed to smoke or heat, wet a towel, handkerchief or any kind of cloth and stuff it into the mouth. Breathe through it instead of the nose; it will keep smoke and heat from the lungs and the moisture will be helpful.

Do not scream or inhale deeply if in flame or smoke. A deep breath may cause unconsciousness or even death. More people lose their lives in a fire by suffocation than by actual burning.

Never jump unless the blaze is scorching and not then if firemen are near. Wait a minute longer until they can reach you by ladder. Remember that a jump to the pavement or ground from any story above the second is almost certain death.

AGRICULTURAL PRODUCTS TO BE FIESTA FEATURE

FRENCH CAPITAL READY TO TAKE OVER BIG GROUP

Considering Material Development On Mines Owned By B. R. X. Company

By Sidney Norman
B.R.X. Gold Mines Ltd., owning 40 claims and fractions in one solid group, between Bralorne and Wayside mines, in the Bridge River district, and covering a lateral distance of approximately three miles, is to be further developed in a large way by French capital, if the deal to be officially outlined by circular letter in the next few days is approved by shareholders at a subsequent meeting to be called for the purpose.

Deal By Jukes
The deal was originated by A. E. Jukes, head of the firm of A. E. Jukes & Co., on his first trip to Europe last fall, and was closed during the visit he has just completed.

Since his arrival here details of the arrangements have been accepted by cable, after the property had been thoroughly examined by Andre Fonville, a leading French mining engineer, formerly head of the Pyrotechnique of Paris, and with wide experience in Russia, South Africa and other parts of the world.

If the deal is ratified by shareholders, it will involve organization under laws of British Columbia of a new company with a capital of 3,750,000 shares of par value of 50 cents.

Reorganization Details
Of this capital, 1,250,000 shares will be issued to holders of 2,350,000 shares of the 2,500,000 issued 50-cent shares of the present company, or at the rate of a little over one share of new for two shares of old stock.

The French syndicate will take up, each month for ten months, 500,000 shares at the rate of 20 cents net per share, thus providing the sum of $100,000 up till July, 1936.

The first payment to be made on October 15, will cover two such monthly installments and will be $20,000. The next payment will be $10,000 on December 31, 1935, and thereafter $10,000 will be paid each month until July, 1936.

By that time it is expected sufficient work will have been done to enable the new interests to arrive at a proper estimate of the value of the property and thereby determine its future course.

Capital For Mill
If development proves satisfactory, the syndicate will then take up 400,000 shares each month at 20 cents net, or $80,000 monthly, continuing equal payments for like amounts each month for five months or until a total of $500,000 has been paid in for the entire treasury issue of 2,500,000 shares and providing adequately for milling facilities.

The theory upon which the syndicate is acting through its engineer, who is reported to have been much impressed with the possibilities of the district, is that there have been successive lateral slips from Pioneer northwesterly and that the area of greatest enrichment lies deeper than the lowest point yet reached by Bralorne or by B.R.X. in the California shaft on the southeastern part of its ground.

The crosscut now being run in the northeast section of the ground is in 1375 feet from portal and about 300 feet lower than the bottom of the California shaft, but it will be necessary to drift approximately 7000 feet to get under the latter point and, according to the theory of the French engineer, that horizon may still be at an elevation above the area of greatest enrichment.

The present company is running three shifts in advancing the crosscut and has approximately $25,000 in its treasury, or sufficient to carry operations till next October. It is thus obvious that considerably more capital expenditures will be necessary to give the ground a thorough test.

B. R. X. United
The name by which the new company will be known in event of ratification has not been definitely decided, although B. R. X. Amalgamated or United have been suggested. At any rate, the initials B. R. X. will be retained according to sentiment so far expressed.

The new stock to be issued to shareholders is to be held in escrow subject, first, to the orders of the Superintendent of Brokers and, secondly, to the first part of the option granted to the French interests, that is, till July, 1936.

The present company which, for a while, will be in the nature of a holding company, will have the privilege of naming two directors out of seven to be provided in the new company setup.

Deal Optional
In explaining details, Mr. Jukes says that the only firm commitment is that involving the first double payment of $20,000 on October 15, but that, in his presence when in Paris, the members of the syndicate were advised by Mons. Fonville that it should be prepared to spend at least $100,000 in the preliminary test.

It is therefore believed that, in the absence of abnormal events, the arrangement will be at least carried out to the extent of the latter sum, which will finance development up till well beyond July, 1936, since it will be impossible to expend $10,000 advantageously each month until the property has been further developed.

range-ment will be at least carried out to the extent of the latter sum, which will finance development up till well beyond July, 1936, since it will be impossible to expend $10,000 advantageously each month until the property has been further developed.

They that make a graven image are all of them vanity; and their delectable things shall not profit; and they are their own witnesses; they see not, nor know; that they may be ashamed" (Isa. 44: 6, 9).

The following passage from the Christian Science textbook, "Science and Health with Key to the Scriptures" by Mary Baker Eddy, will also be included: "Spirit and matter can neither coexist nor co-operate, and one can no more create the other than Truth can create error, or vice versa. Mold Defies Research

The tobacco raiser of the South is forced to carry on a survival of the fittest battle against a disease which appears to have obtained a firm foothold. The disease, designated by the rather poetic names of blue mold or downy mildew, attacks the plants in the seed bed. Despite years of research, no effective method of direct attack on the disease have been perfected. The only method left to the tobacco grower is to plant so much of the seed that enough survivors for transplanting may be obtained despite the disease.

Color and Light Are Co-Partners

Official of Decorators' Society Urges Protection of Eyesight.

The important part that painting and decorating play in aiding eyesight is emphasized in a recent statement by Ray Isard, well-known decorator of Omaha, who is also first vice president of the International Society of Master Painters and Decorators.

"It is not only important to have adequate lighting facilities," says Mr. Isard, "but it is imperative to have wall surfaces that make the most of that light. All members of the painting craft in the country are being urged to support wholeheartedly the splendid Better Light—Better Sight Movement. Such backing is not only a benefit to every community but a humanitarian service for those who, as a result, guard their priceless gift of good eyesight."

Mr. Isard calls attention to the fact that this movement applies not only to the home but also to the factory and office, to schools and hospitals. In talking of such structures, Mr. Isard says that window openings in the walls of light shafts and exterior areaways need particular attention. Many such "wells" receive little light and cause the rooms on which they open to be dim and gloomy.

"When such areaways and light shafts are painted white," points out Mr. Isard, "a flood of light is reflected through the windows and the adjacent rooms are made much brighter. Seeing conditions are greatly improved and efficiency is increased."

"Owners of large office buildings are becoming more and more conscious of the way illumination can be increased by reflection and of the saving of their tenants' eyesight. This has brought about the painting of the dark and dismal areas," Mr. Isard states.

"Scientists have established the fact that unpainted red brick has a coefficient of light reflection of only 15 or 20 per cent, while the same brick painted with a high-grade white paint has a reflection coefficient of 80 per cent," Mr. Isard points out.

He urges all owners of buildings to get behind the Better Light—Better Sight campaign by repainting dark areaways. "They will not only be rendering their tenants a real service," Mr. Isard states, "but tenants will be easier to attract and hold as a result of the brighter quarters they have to offer."

Long Time Between Drinks for Many Hawaiian Cows

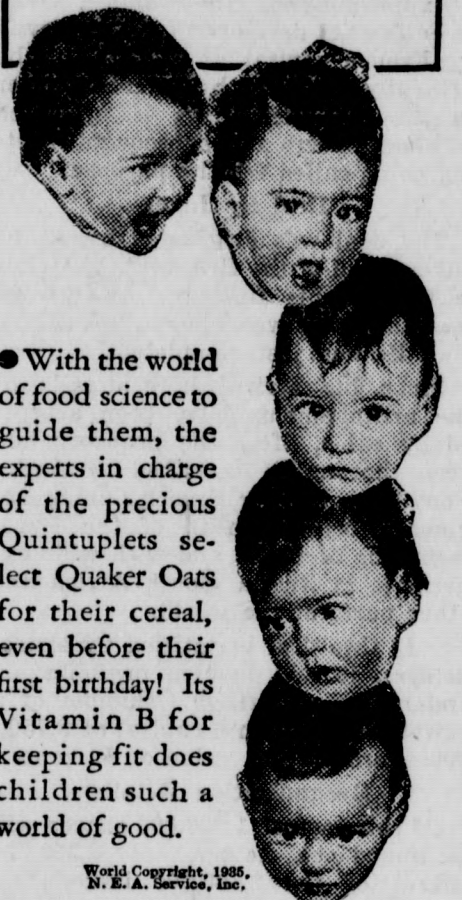

Reports on cattle in Hawaii that do not drink water for long periods are verified by a representative of the bureau of animal industry, United States Department of Agriculture, in Honolulu, who tells of a number of cases where ranch cattle in the dry regions get along for months in spite of the lack of streams, springs, water holes, and artificial water supplies. The animals get the needed moisture from the succulent leaves of cactus or other plants, from dew and rain on leaves, and from occasional small pools that remain after rain.

There have been stories that some of these cattle refuse to drink water from a pool or tank and that they are even afraid of water. The bureau man reports that ranchers do not corroborate such statements. Ranchers say that cattle find pools often enough so that they are acquainted with the appearance of water in that form.

On one large ranch on the Island of Hawaii, only 6 inches of rain fell in 1933 instead of the usual 20 to 40 inches. The cattle were turned in on a large cactus area where there was no available water except that in the plants, and very few deaths of animals were reported.

SOME DOINGS OF SUPERVISORS IN REGULAR SESSION

At the meeting of the County Supervisors on Monday, the board instructed Kellogg to secure maps of utility companies showing their property in the county to determine if all the property is on the assessment rolls.

Supervisor Albert Witt Jr., of Daly City asserted that electric light charges in rural districts were "excessive."

Dr. Charles C. Gans, public health director, notified the board that changes were ordered in many of the 39 hog ranches visited by him in the Colma district. He asked the board to delay award of permits for the hog ranches for one month pending compliance with his orders. Ranches which have not made the changes will not receive favorable recommendations, Dr. Gans said.

The board filed a letter of appreciation from Robert Higgins, president of the Broadway Development association, Burlingame, for reduction of the tax rate.

Request the state relief commission for approval of a social survey of the county was referred to the county relief director.

MORE "HOT AIR" IN OUSTER MOVE AGAINST KELLOGG

Beer Wants Resignation Of County Executive, But Refuses To Make Specific Charges.

would bring charges against the executive, and suggested that a week would give the San Mateo supervisor more time to consider the matter.

"I've been thinking this matter over now for six or seven months," Beer said, "and I don't need more time to think about it. I've reached the conclusion that a step in the best interests of the people would be to have a change in the office of county executive."

Supervisor Manuel Francis of Half Moon Bay declared he "wasn't going to get into more messes like the Morrison and engineer messes," and wouldn't commit himself for the resolution.

"Anyway, I don't think Kellogg will resign," Francis said.

Kellogg himself offered his statement, which he had prepared, and County Clerk E. B. Hinman read the two pages of counter charges against Supervisor Beer and Poole.

After detailing the move of a week ago Tuesday in which Kellogg's resignation was unsuccessfully sought by Beer, Kellogg launched into a condemnation of the activities of Supervisors Beer and Poole.

"If Supervisors Beer and Poole were sincere in their statements concerning unsavory publicity attaching itself to the administration of the county government, they have proven themselves decidedly inconsistent," Kellogg's statement said.

"For they themselves, in the attempt to force my resignation, provided for the press the most distasteful headlines about San Mateo County."

"I have refused to keep men in public office by appointment despite the fact they were friends of Supervisors Beer and Poole, because I felt they were not qualified."

Kellogg then recited that, although Poole had aided him in getting the office, shortly thereafter his "friendship" ceased because he considered me "unappreciative."

"I have always administered the duties of my office in the interests of public welfare and never have and never shall use it to pay off so-called personal debts of gratitude," he said.

As some of the reasons he had incurred the enmity of the two supervisors, Kellogg mentioned:

"My refusal to keep in public office a man, a friend of Supervisor Poole, who caused no end of trouble in the courthouse by his gossip and agitating."

"My refusal to appoint, at the inception of the charter, a man chosen by Supervisor Poole for county engineer."

"My refusal to appoint as county treasurer a man friendly to Supervisor Beer.

"My refusal to re-appoint to office a public official who had the support of Supervisors Beer and Poole and who one day offered me clothing, an ocean trip and a substantial sum of money if I would keep him on the job."

Mr. Kellogg concluded with: "I cannot say that Supervisors Beer and Poole were aware of the man's lucrative offer."

It is significant that no denial of these charges was made at the time by either of these two supervisors.

Supervisor Walter High of Burlingame declared he believed the time inopportune, to bring the matter of Kellogg's resignation up, and therefore he would vote against the resolution.
